Alumni Stories – Logan Altman

Logan Altman graduated from Santiago Canyon College (SCC) in 2013 with an Associate of Arts in Business Administration. Since graduating SCC, Mr. Altman went on to obtain a Bachelor of Science in Business Administration from California Baptist University.

Mr. Altman is currently the Director of Customer Experience at Doing Good Works, a certified benefit corporation that uses print, branded merchandise, and fulfillment services to support better outcomes for young people impacted by foster care. The company has grown from a modest agency to the second fastest growing promotional and branding agency in North America, leading to back-to-back placements on INC 5000's Fastest Growing Private Businesses in America. Mr. Altman, along with the company's two co-founders, was recently awarded the 2020 Bess Cohn Humanitarians of the Year. They were selected out of over 25,000 individuals for their efforts to use the promotional products industry as a driver of social change. Most recently, Mr. Altman had the honor of supplying millions of personal protective equipment to healthcare workers across the nation during the COVID-19 pandemic.

Mr. Altman is passionate about fishing, making music, playing golf, and spending time with his wife, 11 month old daughter, and family dog.

Favorite memory of SCC was taking Dr. Binh Vu's "Music Appreciation" course. Dr. Vu, otherwise known as "DV" always came to class with a smile on his face and taught with pure enthusiasm. You could tell Dr. Vu really wanted us students to not only pass the course, but have a similar appreciation for music history. Since then, we've become friends outside of college and work together occasionally at the church where he worships.
